

SUICIDE OF DOCTOR LEFT BIG MYSTERY

DETROIT, June 25.—When Dr. Frank R. Loomis took his own life recently by turning on the gas in his office, he bequeathed to the Detroit police one of the most puzzling mysteries they have ever had—mystery that probably will remain forever unsolved.

The mystery is this: who killed Dr. Loomis's wife, Grace R. Loomis, in the last night of her life on the evening of Feb. 22, 1927?

Dr. Loomis had been accused of the murder. He was arrested, brought to trial and acquitted a little less than a year ago.

Of course, there were those who shook their heads over that acquittal. They couldn't actually prove anything on him, but—That was the sort of comment one hears.

And when Dr. Loomis killed himself recently, leaving a note addressed to the police which said: "Within 24 hours an article will appear in the Detroit newspaper explaining this mystery. It will say: 'Then please be patient with me.' It was taken for granted that the Detroit police would be forbidden to say it was he who committed suicide."

Just before his death Dr. Loomis made the Detroit News a statement of the reasons for his suicide. In it he reiterated what he had said to the police which said "hounded" him, that people would not stop talking about him, that his professional practice had been ruined, that he was tired of being pointed out as "the man who killed his wife." It was he who committed suicide.

It doesn't seem like the sort of thing one would expect a man to do. But it left the question—who did it? It was a question which the police were to solve. The police were to solve it. The police were to solve it.

When the bodies of the couple were examined the other day at Los Angeles, W. P. Gong, a Chinese doctor who was present, was asked to give a statement of the case. He said that he had seen the bodies of the couple when they were returned from a walk about the city.

Dr. Loomis was found in a room on the second floor of the hotel. He was found in a room on the second floor of the hotel. He was found in a room on the second floor of the hotel.

THE CO-OPERATIVE INSTITUTE

Several hundred delegates, representing locals of the United Farmers organization in all sections of the province, are expected to gather in Edmonton this week to attend the co-operative institute which has been arranged to be held at the university buildings. This will be the first gathering of the kind to take place in Canada. It is planned on a large province-wide scale. The object is to consider co-operation, as it is and may be applied to the business of farming, and particularly to the various similar movements in Great Britain and the United States are on the program, and the sessions are expected to give advice to the co-operative idea in Alberta.

The wheat pool is the most outstanding development of the co-operative movement in the province that has yet taken place. Largely as the result of the success that has been met in that undertaking, pools are now in active existence in Alberta in the case of several other kinds of farm produce by similar methods. The prospect is that co-operative agencies for the sale of all classes of farm products will be brought into operation throughout the prairie country. The institute to be held next week may be expected to further that object, and is thus an event of interest to the entire public, as well as of direct concern to the farmer.

EUROPE STARTING TO PAY?

Washington notes with satisfaction that continental Europe is doing better in the matter of paying its war debts. Last week the U.S. treasury was enriched by $50,000,000 from the payments made by countries on the other side of the Atlantic. Of this, $37,000,000 was the regular semi-annual payment made by Great Britain. The other twenty countries apparently managed among them to dig up $23,000,000, something less than $2,000,000 each. And all this they are doing a good deal better than they had been doing; enough better that Washington makes public note of the improvement.

It is traditional, of course, that Europe is a wealthy country. And it is pretty well understood by this time that continental Europe is hardly so. But such was the boast of the Englishman never claimed that his countrymen were so relatively opulent as these figures suggest.

If Washington is pleased with pleased surprise at being able to get $23,000,000 out of the whole of continental Europe, it is not so much because the British taxpayer has been sending $67,000,000 to Washington every six months for five years and a half, either Britain must be very rich, or the previous report of the continental countries have been underestimating their own ability to pay.

It is pertinent to note that the $67,000,000 which the British taxpayer sends to Washington every six months is not to get money but to get credit. On the account, but money which continental countries in their hour of crisis were able to borrow because he backed their notes. If Washington is pleased at the sign that the continentals are beginning to pay up, John Bull would seem to be entitled to do some rejoicing too.

THE REAL "PROBLEM"

Figures given out by the Canadian Bureau of Statistics show that during the past five years 573,864 people entered Canada to reside, while 591,121 people left the Dominion to reside in other parts of the States. These have been years during which the exodus from Canada has been particularly heavy, and the outflow has been less than 150,000 per year for the period. For a few years immediately preceding these the movement was very much heavier. Conditions have been steadily in Canada during the past five years, with general and unusual prosperity plainly in sight. The financial inducement to Canadians to remain at home is, and has been, unusually strong, and emigration has been correspondingly light in comparison to that in other countries. Yet, with a pretty active immigration campaign carried on in Britain, in the United States, and in other parts of Europe, the exodus has exceeded the influx by about 20,000 people.

That is the phase of migration with which the special parliamentary committee at Ottawa should have been concerned. It is the fact that the late session rather than looking about the cause of the administrative details for evidence of minor defects. The bald and all-important fact is that people have been getting out of the country faster than they have been coming in. Why, and how to stop the loss, are questions to which the committee should have turned its attention, if anything of consequence is to be achieved. The first problem is not to get more people from Europe, but how to keep Canadians in Canada. If the best that we are doing under the remarkably favorable conditions which prevail in this country, is to keep emigration down to about the volume of immigration, a parliamentary committee on migration ought to be trying to find out why young Canada does not set a little value upon a country of whose immense and varied resources we have every reason to boast.

In the Garden

By EDGAR E. GUEST

Old folks see the tulips red
Glowing in my garden bed.
Childhood with a clearer sight
Peeps into the blossoms bright.
And upon a silver chair
Sees a fairy sitting there.

Old folks walk my garden round
With an air that's most profound.
Being here and there a weed
Noting blossoms gone to seed.
Little Jane, though can tell
Vagaries where good will.

Age which knows so much
All the dead limbs on the tree,
Every kink round the place,
Just with a bagful of
Has a thousand charms to show,
Charms which only children know.

The Bible Up to Date

By DR. FRANK MCDOY

A new analytical reference Bible, just put out, marks a significant step in the progress of Bible study.

It is a far cry from the day when the investigating student had to read the Scriptures for himself and look up the meaning of every word in the dictionary, and today, when the modern student has such a book as the Bible at his elbow.

This Bible, first of all, gives us the authorized English version of the Bible. This version, which is the basis of all our Bibles, is the result of the efforts of the translators of the Bible, who have been working for many years to bring the Bible up to date.

It is an analysis of the Bible, taking up the various subjects mentioned in the book, there are examples of the work of the translators of the Bible, who have been working for many years to bring the Bible up to date.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK MCDOY

Diet Specialist and Author of "The Fast Way to Health"

Questions on Health and Diet Answered by Dr. McDoy, when addressed in care of the Edmonton Bulletin.

FOOD MINERALS (Part I)

Mineral elements have been neglected by the older school of dietitians, but recent investigations have proven that, though only used in small quantities, mineral elements are essential to life itself.

It is interesting to my readers, I have decided to give a list of these elements and their uses, together with the foods which contain the largest amounts of each.

Some of these minerals, as they are found in the chemical shop, are exceedingly poisonous, but after they have been absorbed and made use of by plants, they become useful elements. While every natural, unrefined food contains all of these elements in some proportion, it is convenient for dietetic purposes to group those together which are richest in special elements.

It would be well to clip out this and the following article for reference.

Phosphorus is a stimulant of growth and activity. This tendency must be curbed by the presence of sulphur and alkaline elements or there will be a tendency to nervous irritability and bone diseases. Some phosphorus is necessary to the functioning of the brain. This does not mean that you can advice me what to do, to help my mother who is seventy-seven years old. The doctor says she is getting old, but she is falling in years. I feel something could be done to give her back her strength, at least. I have heard about the benefits of sulphur, but I have never seen any sulphur.
